First Memories of Burrton... By Allie Farrar Warren

"Sixty five years ago today I came to Kansas with my parents, Cyrus and Ruth Farrar. In the fall of 1874 I remember going with my father to a meeting at our schoolhouse, near Chaseburg, Wisc., for the purpose of collecting money and clothing to help the people of Kansas who had suffered the loss of food and seed from the grasshopper invasion. Little did we think, then, that in less than two years we would be moving there. Our uncle (Jefferson Waters) had moved to near Burrton and had written in glowing words of the rich, rolling prairies, mild climate, and cheap land. So we sold our farm and all that we possessed and bought tickets on the Santa Fe. We arrived in Burrton on the evening of March 22, 1876, worn and weary after several days of travel. The depot was on the northeast side of the track. There were no sidewalks, and there had been a heavy snow a few days before. The road was deep in mud, and we waded, shoe top deep, across the road to a small hotel on the west side of the Main Street, and there we spent our first night in Burrton. The next morning Uncle Jeff came for us in the big wagon drawn by a team of oxen. Father bought school land, 160 acres across the road from my uncle's farm (the quarter section one-half mile west of Paxton elevator) and started to build a house, and break the sod to plant corn. The neighbors helped father build our house, and he in turn helped them. Soon after our house was built father came home with a load of cottonwood "switches," and I wondered what he was going to do with them. Father brought out two knives, and while I watched, he and mother cut rather short pieces of the green limbs of the cottonwood. Then I helped Father plant the cuttings in a small bed, and helped keep the weeds pulled around them. The next spring we planted the little trees all around the house, and in to rows next to the road, the length of our farm, for a wind break. One morning in the summer of seventy-six mother called, "Children, come help me kill this rattlesnake!" We found a large rattlesnake in the kitchen under the cupboard. We didn't have a hoe or stick so I ran to my uncle's for a hoe while my brother watched it. Then he pulled the snake out of the house and killed it. My mother, baby brother, and I had slept in the bedroom without any door between that and the kitchen. After that we got mosquito bar netting and tacked on our windows, as wire screens could not be obtained. That fall the grasshoppers ate up most of the mosquito netting." Written March 22, 1941 by Allie Warren.

Adding "Media" allows a tremendous amount of information to be attached to the individual. This can include photos, headstone photos, biographies, obituaries and news stories, living family member information, and even audio recordings and videos. This is an example of some Media collections attached to an Individual.

It is VERY IMPORTANT that you FIRST select the correct “Collection” to create. While new collections can be added, it is somewhat discouraged for uniformity sake. If possible, please consider the following Collections, from the drop down menu:

- Obituary – can be typed in or a scanned copy attached.
- Photos – scanned or digital photographs.
- Documents – scanned copies of any document – a letter, certificate, census record, etc.
- Headstones – scanned or digital photographs.
- Histories – typed or scanned PDF format – biographies, family history writings, genealogical information, personal reflections, etc.
- Recordings & Videos – must be fairly small files.
- Living Relative – the name and contact information for yourself or anyone else researching this person, so that others may contact you to share information.
- Newspaper – any newspaper articles besides obituaries, typed or scanned PDF copy.

Gooch, Infant - Jan. 14, 1904 to Jan. 20, 1905. "The infant son of Mr. and Mrs. J. Gooch, who resided on the old Newman farm south of town, met death in a peculiar and distressing manner last Friday. The child was drowned in a common candy bucket which contained only about 4 inches of water. It seems the mother had left the kitchen in which there were 3 small children and after an absence of only a few minutes returned, and on missing the baby, asked the other children where the baby had gone. They were frightened, but pointed to the bucket where the little one's feet were protruding. She at once rescued the baby and attempted to bring it back to life but to no avail. The child, a baby only a few months of age had evidently toppled over into the bucket and helpless to cry or extricate himself had drowned in this seemingly incredible manner. The funeral was held at the family home Saturday and the body was buried at Hillside." (The Sedgwick Pantagraph, January 26, 1905. Copy provided by Patti Unruh).
